

Chemeketa Community College Digital Course Materials Fee Program

Digital Course Materials Fee-DCMF explained

The DCMF is a collaborative program between the bookstore, faculty and publishers. Classes with the DCMF designation allow students to receive access to their required course materials on the first day of class at a reduced cost compared to the national average and be billed on their student account. This program saves the student time and money.

DCMF OFFERS:

- Day 1 access to digital course materials through Canvas LMS
- Easy payment as it is added to the class costs and paid like tuition
- Reduced course materials cost compared to current print and digital options
- Interactive digital content and ebooks

FAQ:

How much does DCMF cost?

Prices will vary depending on the course materials chosen by your instructor. Prices are listed at bookstore.chemeketa.edu with the course information.

How am I billed for DCMF?

A charge to your My.Chemeketa account will be posted along with tuition and fees for the course.

What does it mean to opt-out?

The opt-out option will be in a link within the course in Canvas. If you do not want to receive digital course material through this model you can opt-out by the second Friday of the term and receive a refund on your account by the sixth week of the term. Access to the digital content will be revoked at that time, and you will be responsible to find the required course material by other means. If you change your mind in those first two weeks, you will have the option to opt back in. Students who have opted out of the DCMF program are not eligible to purchase the companion optional low cost print copy of the text.

Is there an optional print copy of the text?

The bookstore sells optional print copies for many of these courses as part of the DCMF program. These are not substitutes, but are in addition to the digital content. Please check your course requirements at bookstore.chemeketa.edu to see if there is an optional print version available.
